WORK! FIGHT! GIVE!

03/30/18 - 04/29/18

This is not the story of courage in combat, not the story of the dropping of bombs, rarely the story of rattling machine guns or the bursting of artillery shells; rather, it is the story of those motivated to do something about the carnage and chaos left behind when the din of battle subsides and the armies move on. Relief organizations in big cities and small towns alike found creative ways to mobilize Americans and collectively raise millions of dollars to help those in war zones. Work, Fight, Give focuses on those who gave of their artistic talents to design posters that were aimed at the heart of Americans, to persuade citizens to donate their time and resources. Many of America's top artists and illustrators designed the relief posters, and they often employed historical, mythological, and cultural symbols representing various countries and cultures. From the regional sensibilities of Grant Wood, to the illustrative style of Arthur Szyk, to the painterly styles of James Montgomery Flagg and Martha Sawyers, the posters branded and differentiated various agencies all competing under the National War Fund name.

CHISHOLM TRAIL SESQUICENTENNIAL: DRIVING THE AMERICAN WEST, 1867-2017

The Chisholm Trail fundamentally changed the American West. From the birth of the cowboy as an icon to the revival of the cattle industry, the Old Chisholm Trail helped shape our popular culture by altering how we thought of the American West and the individuals who lived there. The Chisholm Trail: Driving the American West is a celebration of the 150th anniversary of the Chisholm Trail. This traveling exhibit, a collaboration between Symphony in the Flint Hills and Flint Hill Design with major sponsorship from Lost Trail Soda, invites visitors of all ages to explore the Chisholm Trail from its inception in the 1860's to today.

Exhibit highlights include the founding fathers of the Chisholm Trail, life on the trail, and the birth of the cowboy as an American icon. Several interactive explorations are included as well as several artistically rendered, life-size longhorn cattle. The exhibit embodies the spirit of the West in look and feel.

The Chisholm Trail: Driving the American West is a joint project of Symphony in the Flint Hills and Flint Hills Design. Major funding in the creation of this exhibit came from Lost Trail Soda.
